

Three out of four employers want new hires with precisely the sorts of skills that the humanities teach: critical thinking, complex problem-solving, as well as written and oral communication.

Source: It Takes More Than a Major (Association of American Colleges and Universities, 2013)